TTD - How We Invest in Our Infrastructure Matters

Strong infrastructure and a well-functioning transportation system are vital to the health of our economy, but for too long we've treated our infrastructure as though it doesn't matter. And for too long, working people have paid the price.

The American Society of Civil Engineers estimates it will take $4 trillion over the next eight years to repair the damage to our roads, bridges, transit and rail systems, seaports, and airports caused by decades of neglect. With strong public and bipartisan support — and a dire need — for robust investment into our nation's crumbling transportation infrastructure, the question now is how to pay for such a massive price tag.
